

Save time & money with our textbook tips

| | |
|--|---|
| 1 Buy used books to save approximately 25% | We stock some 40,000 used books that offer you substantial savings over new books, and because they're here in store, you can inspect them before buying. |
| 2 Print your booklist before hitting the Store | You'll find your personalized booklist online at store.cornell.edu two weeks before the semester begins – print and bring it with you and you won't have to wait in kiosk lines. |
| 3 Avoid shopping during peak periods | Our busiest hours are 11:30 am-2:30 pm. Shop earlier or later for a faster checkout. But even during the busiest times, checkout takes only a few minutes. |
| 4 Consider attending class before buying your books | Knowing how and when the books will be used in class can help you make purchase decisions. But note that waiting may mean used copies of popular titles are no longer available. |
| 5 Pay attention to the book return rules | Books and CoursePacks in their original condition can be returned within one week from the date of purchase when accompanied by an original receipt. If you drop a class, you can return the textbooks within three days of the drop date with a drop slip. |
| 6 Get cash back during Textbook Buyback | We pay up to 50% of the new book price on titles adopted for the following semester, even if you purchased the book used or from another source. Provide your Cornell ID or Net ID when you make your purchase and we'll e-mail you the buyback prices for your books at the end of the semester. |
| 7 Save your receipts for potential tax savings | Thanks to the new American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA), textbook and other course material expenses incurred in 2009 or 2010 that are not covered by scholarship or grant aid may qualify as a tax credit on that year's tax return. You may also qualify for reimbursement under the GI Bill. |
